Crafting Your Answers

Now that you have an idea of the types of questions you may face, it's time to focus on how to answer them effectively.

1. Why do you want to change careers?

When responding to this question, be honest and specific. Here's a framework to help you structure your answer:

- Begin with your current situation: Briefly explain what you currently do and why you are looking for a change.

- Highlight your motivation: Discuss what attracts you to the new field. Perhaps it's a passion you've always had or a desire for more fulfilling work.
- Connect it to your skills: Mention how your past experiences can enrich your new career.

2. What transferable skills do you bring to this new role?

When discussing your transferable skills, consider the following steps:

- Identify relevant skills: Reflect on your previous job roles and pinpoint skills that are applicable to the new position.

Example Answer: "In my previous job, our team underwent a major organizational shift, and I was tasked with leading a new project that required collaboration with unfamiliar departments. I took the initiative to schedule meetings with key stakeholders to understand their needs and expectations.
