Summary of the Fable

The fable begins with a boastful hare who mocks the tortoise for being slow. Tired of the hare's continuous teasing, the tortoise challenges the hare to a race. Confident in his speed, the hare accepts the challenge, certain that he will win without difficulty. The race begins, and the hare quickly pulls ahead, leaving the tortoise far behind.

With the tortoise still plodding along, the hare decides to take a break, convinced he has ample time to spare. He falls asleep, while the tortoise continues to move steadily forward. Eventually, the tortoise passes the sleeping hare and crosses the finish line first. When the hare wakes up, he realizes that he has lost the race, teaching him a valuable lesson about underestimating others and the consequences of overconfidence.
