- Literary Works: The works of authors like Ludovico Ariosto and Torquato Tasso further established the norms of written Italian, leading to greater acceptance of a standardized language.

Modern Italian (18th Century - Present)

- National Identity: The need for a common language became paramount for fostering a sense of national identity and unity.
- Alessandro Manzoni: His novel "I Promessi Sposi" (The Betrothed), published in 1827, was written in a form of Italian that would become the standard language. Manzoni's work was instrumental in promoting the Tuscan dialect as the national language.
