This article delves into the rich history of the Santa Anita Race Track, exploring its origins, key events, and lasting impact on the horse racing industry.

Origins of Santa Anita Race Track

The dream of establishing a premier racetrack in Southern California was realized through the vision of prominent businessman and horse racing enthusiast, Frank S. "Sunny" Haskin.

Early Development

1. Land Acquisition: In 1932, Haskin and a group of investors purchased a 320-acre site in Arcadia, which was previously used for horse training.
2. Design and Construction: Haskin enlisted the services of architect Gordon Kaufmann, who designed the track with a distinctive Art Deco style. The construction was completed in a remarkably short time, and the track opened its doors on December 25, 1934.

Inaugural Season

The inaugural season at Santa Anita was a resounding success, drawing large crowds and attracting top horses and jockeys. The track's first race was held on Christmas Day, and the event quickly gained popularity. The lush landscaping, beautiful vistas of the San Gabriel Mountains, and innovative amenities made Santa Anita a favored destination for racing fans.
