

I Will Fight No More Forever

I Will Fight no More Forever
By: Chief Joseph

I am tired of fighting.
Our chiefs are killed.
Looking Glass is dead.
Toohululsote is dead.
The old men are all dead.
It is the young men who say no and yes.
He who led the young men is dead.
It is cold and we have no blankets.
The little children are freezing to death.
My people, some of them,
Have run away to the hills
And have no blankets, no food.
No one know where they are-
Perhaps they are freezing to death.
I want to have time to look for my children
And see how many of them I can find.
Maybe I shall find them among the dead.
Hear me, my chiefs, I am tired.
My heart is sad and sick.
From where the sun now stands
I will fight no more forever.

I will fight no more forever is a poignant declaration that resonates deeply within the context of Native American history, particularly in relation to the Nez Perce War of 1877. It reflects the deep sense of loss, surrender, and resignation felt by Indigenous peoples as they faced relentless encroachment on their lands, cultures, and ways of life. This phrase, uttered by Chief Joseph of the Nez Perce tribe, encapsulates a moment of profound significance that continues to echo in discussions about indigenous rights, cultural preservation, and historical injustices.

Historical Context

To understand the weight of Chief Joseph's words, it is essential to explore the historical backdrop against which they were spoken. The Nez Perce people inhabited the Pacific Northwest, an area rich in resources and cultural heritage. However, the mid-19th century marked a time of severe upheaval, driven by the westward expansion of settlers and the discovery of gold in the region.

The Nez Perce War

The Nez Perce War was a response to increasing pressures from the U.S. government and settlers. In 1855, the U.S. government signed a treaty with the Nez Perce that established a reservation for them. However, in 1863, a new treaty was imposed, significantly reducing their land and ignoring their rights. This betrayal led to growing tensions and, ultimately, armed conflict.

- Key Events of the War:

1. Initial Conflicts: The Nez Perce, under Chief Joseph's leadership, resisted the government's attempts to relocate them to a smaller reservation.
2. Retreat and Resistance: The tribe undertook a remarkable 1,170-mile journey across the Rocky Mountains, evading U.S. troops in a desperate bid for freedom.
3. Final Surrender: After several battles and significant losses, Chief Joseph surrendered on October 5, 1877, at Bear Paw Mountain in Montana.

Chief Joseph: A Symbol of Resistance

Chief Joseph, born Hin-mah-too-yah-lat-kekt in 1840, emerged as a prominent leader during the Nez Perce War. His eloquence and commitment to peace and justice have made him an enduring symbol of resistance against oppression.

The Speech of Surrender

The phrase "I will fight no more forever" comes from Chief Joseph's surrender speech, delivered to General Nelson A. Miles. It is a heart-wrenching acknowledgment of defeat and the painful acceptance of a new reality. His words express not only the loss of his people's homeland but also the emotional toll of the conflict:

> "I am tired of fighting. Our chiefs are killed. Looking Glass is dead. The old men are all dead. It is the young men who say yes or no. He who lead the young men is dead. It is my heart that is tired."

This speech encapsulates the sorrow of a people who had fought valiantly to retain their way of life but ultimately faced insurmountable odds.
