This article delves into the intricacies of Scene 2, examining its characters, themes, and significance within the broader narrative of the play.

Setting the Scene

Context within the Play

Scene 2 occurs shortly after the dramatic opening of the play, where Oedipus is approached by Teiresias, the blind prophet. The city of Thebes is suffering from a plague, and Oedipus has sent Creon, his brother-in-law, to consult the oracle at Delphi for guidance. The urgency of the situation sets the stage for the revelations that unfold in this scene.

Characters Involved

The Dramatic Conflict

Oedipus's Arrogance and Teiresias's Prophecy

In this scene, Oedipus's arrogance is palpable as he insists on uncovering the truth, demonstrating his belief in his own power and intelligence. He confronts Teiresias, demanding to know who killed Laius. Teiresias, however, is reluctant to reveal the truth, suggesting that knowledge can be a curse. This interplay highlights the tension between human will and predestined fate.

- Oedipus's Determination: Oedipus's insistence on finding Laius's murderer showcases his unwavering determination to protect his people, but it also foreshadows his tragic downfall.
- Teiresias's Reluctance: Teiresias's hesitance to speak underscores the gravity of the truth he holds. His blindness is symbolic; although he cannot see physically, he possesses insight into Oedipus's fate.

The Accusation and Denial

Oedipus cannot fathom the reality of his situation.
