3. Place

Place refers to how products are distributed and where they are available for purchase. Key aspects include:

- Distribution Channels: Direct vs. indirect distribution methods.

Segmentation involves dividing a broader market into smaller, more defined groups based on characteristics such as:

- Demographic Segmentation: Age, gender, income, education, etc.
- Geographic Segmentation: Location-based divisions.
- Psychographic Segmentation: Lifestyle, values, and personality traits.
- Behavioral Segmentation: Consumer behavior patterns, such as usage frequency.

Once segments are identified, businesses must choose which segments to focus on. Approaches include:

- Undifferentiated Targeting: Offering a single product to the entire market.
- Differentiated Targeting: Creating different products for different segments.
- Concentrated Targeting: Focusing on a single market segment.

3. Positioning

Positioning involves creating a distinct image of the product in the minds of consumers. Effective positioning strategies often include:
