Directions: Complete each bubble with information about the character. Use evidence from the text.

Significance of her name:
Originally a Norman form of the Germanic name Hrodohaidis meaning "famous type", composed of the elements hrod "fame" and heid "kind, sort, type"

Description of appearance:
Rose is a very simple not elegant at all and is always dressed down she is a stay home mother.

What occupation or work does Rose do? What does this suggest about her role?
Rose does all the work at home she stays home cooks and make sures the house is tighty. This suggest that she hasn't worked since she is with Troy she's just been a stay home mother

According to the stage directions, why is she grateful for having married Troy?
Rose tells Cory that a big part of the reason she married Troy was because she thought he would make good babies. Although Cory and his father did not get along, Rose insists that they are alike, and here she implies that she approves of the resemblance.

One thing another character says about her:
I remember when you met Rose. When you was hitting them baseball out the park. A lot of them old gals was after you then. You had the pick of the litter. When you picked Rose, I was happy for you. That was the first time I knew you had any sense. I said . . . that man Troy knows what he's doing[.]

Two things Rose says that tells us about her character:
Ain't no sense you blaming yourself for nothing. Gabe wasn't in no condition to manage that money. You done what was right by him. Can't nobody say you ain't done what was right by them. Look how long you took care of him . . . till he wanted to have his own place and moved over there with Miss Pearl.

Her "fences":
Rose wants to keep the bad things out and keep the things she loves in and safe - she doesn't want her family to "fall apart" and the fence will keep things the way they are - or the way she wants them to be.

Rose Maxson character analysis reveals a complex and multifaceted character who embodies the struggles and resilience of African American women in mid-20th century America. In August Wilson's play "Fences," Rose serves not just as a supportive wife but also as a strong individual with her own dreams, aspirations, and frustrations. This character analysis delves into Rose's role within the play, her relationships, and the broader themes she represents.

Background and Context

To fully understand Rose Maxson, it's essential to consider the historical and social context in which she exists. The play is set in the 1950s, a time when racial discrimination was prevalent, and African Americans faced significant socio-economic challenges. Rose, as the wife of Troy Maxson, navigates these challenges while also dealing with personal struggles that reflect the broader experiences of women during this era.

Her Life and Aspirations

1. Early Life: Rose's background is not extensively detailed in the play, but it is hinted that her life has been shaped by hardship and resilience. She has had to work hard to create a stable home for her family, highlighting her strength and determination.
2. Dreams and Aspirations: Rose's dreams often take a backseat to the needs of her family, particularly to Troy's ambitions. She represents the sacrifices many women make for their families, showcasing the tension between personal aspirations and familial responsibilities.

Role in the Family

Rose Maxson's role within her family is central to the narrative of "Fences." Her interactions with Troy and their children, Lyons and Cory, reveal much about her character and the dynamics at play.

Relationship with Troy

- Support and Sacrifice: Rose stands by Troy throughout his struggles, providing emotional and practical support. However, her sacrifices come at a cost, leading to feelings of resentment and frustration, especially as Troy's infidelities come to light.
- Conflict and Resolution: The couple's relationship is marked by conflict, particularly over Troy's refusal to allow Cory to pursue football. This conflict highlights the generational differences in their perspectives on opportunity and success.

Motherhood

- Nurturing Figure: Rose embodies the nurturing aspect of motherhood. She is deeply invested in the well-being of her children and often serves as the moral compass of the family.
- Challenges in Parenting: Rose struggles with her role as a mother, particularly in dealing with Troy's authoritative parenting style. Her attempts to protect Cory and guide him reflect her desire for her children to have better opportunities than she did.

Thematic Significance

Rose Maxson is not just a character in a play; she represents larger themes relevant to the African American experience and the struggles of women.

Gender Roles and Expectations

- Traditional Roles: Rose is a reflection of the traditional gender roles of her time. She is expected to be the dutiful wife and mother, often putting her needs aside for her family.
- Challenging Norms: As the play progresses, Rose begins to challenge these norms. Her decision to stand up to Troy after his affair signifies a shift in her character, illustrating her growth and desire for autonomy.

Race and Identity

- Struggles Against Racism: Rose's character is also a lens through which the struggles against racism can be examined. She faces societal challenges that affect her family's livelihood, illustrating the intersectionality of race and gender.
- A Source of Strength: Despite these challenges, Rose remains a figure of strength. Her resilience and determination to create a better life for her family underline the importance of hope and perseverance in the face of adversity.

Symbolism in the Play

Rose serves as a symbol of several important themes within "Fences."

Fences as a Metaphor

- Emotional Barriers: The fences in the play symbolize both physical and emotional barriers. Rose's desire to build a fence around her home reflects her longing for security and protection for her family.
- Isolation vs. Connection: The fence also represents the tension between isolation and connection. While it offers a sense of safety, it can also serve to keep others out, highlighting Rose's internal struggle between her need for self-protection and her desire for connection with Troy and her children.

Faith and Religion

- Spiritual Anchor: Rose's faith plays a crucial role in her character. It provides her with strength and serves as a guiding principle in her life. Her unwavering belief is a source of comfort, especially in times of crisis.
- Conflict with Troy's Beliefs: Rose's spiritual beliefs often clash with Troy's more cynical worldview. This conflict adds depth to their relationship and underscores the struggle between hope and despair.

Conclusion

In conclusion, Rose Maxson character analysis reveals a rich and complex figure whose life encapsulates the struggles of many African American women during the mid-20th century. Through her relationships, sacrifices, and the themes she embodies, Rose emerges as a symbol of strength, resilience, and the enduring quest for identity and autonomy. Her journey from a supportive wife to a woman who asserts her own voice is a powerful narrative that resonates with audiences, making her one of the most compelling characters in August Wilson's oeuvre.

As the play unfolds, Rose's character invites reflection on the intricate dynamics of family, the impact of societal expectations, and the importance of self-assertion in the face of adversity. Her story is a testament to the enduring spirit of women who navigate the complexities of their roles within the family and society at large. Rose Maxson, in all her complexity, stands as a beacon of hope and resilience, embodying the struggles and triumphs of those who came before and those who continue to fight for their voices to be heard.
