How to Use the School of Life 100 Questions

Using the School of Life 100 Questions can be a transformative experience. Here's how to incorporate them into your life effectively:

1. Individual Reflection

Take time to sit down with a journal or a piece of paper. Choose a question from the list and write your thoughts in response. Reflect on the following:

- What does this question mean to me?
- What life experiences shape my answer?
- How can I apply this insight to my daily life?

2. Group Discussions

Gather a group of friends or family members and choose a question to discuss together. This setting can foster open communication and allow everyone to share their perspectives. Consider these tips:

- Create a safe environment where everyone feels comfortable sharing.
- Encourage active listening and respect differing viewpoints.
- Rotate the role of the question asker to involve everyone in the process.

3. Workshops and Retreats

If you're involved in education or personal development, consider incorporating the questions into workshops or retreats. This can serve as an icebreaker or a core activity to promote deeper engagement among participants.

Examples of Thought-Provoking Questions

While the complete list of 100 questions is extensive, here are some examples that exemplify the range and depth of inquiry encouraged by the School of Life:
