Each passage or pair of passages below is followed by a number of questions. After reading each passage or pair, choose the best answer to each question based on what is stated or implied in the passage or passages and in any accompanying graphics (such as a table or graph).

Questions 1-10 are based on the following passage.

This passage is adapted from John O'Hara, "Claude Emerson, Reporter." ©1962 by United States Trust Company of New York. The story takes place in the 1890s.

Football introduced Claude Emerson to his lifework; he was paid $1.50 for his reporting of the out-of-town games in which he played.

Line   The paper had no sports section or regular sports
5   writer in those days. Claude Emerson's account of the previous Saturday's game seldom appeared before Tuesday, and often did not appear until Wednesday. Nevertheless his stories usually ran a full column in length, and when he was ready to graduate
10 from High he was taken on as a general news reporter at $1.50 a week. At the end of two years, when his salary had reached $3.50 a week, he asked to be raised to $10; he was keeping company with Clara Stahlnecker, a high school classmate, and her
15 father would not give his consent to Clara's engagement until Claude was earning $60 a month and had at least $200 in the bank. The editor of the paper, though heartily approving of marriage, could not see his way clear to a salary jump from $3.50 to 20 $10, and took the opportunity to caution Claude against such an impulsive step as matrimony at the age of twenty or twenty-one. "Think these things over, Emerson," said Bob Hooker, the editor.
     "I did think it over, Mr. Hooker," said Claude
25 Emerson. "And I guess I have to tell you, I can get ten dollars at the Telegraph."

"I don't believe you," said Hooker. "When did they tell you that?"
     "Four or five months ago."
30   "Bosh! If that was true you would have said something then."
     "I almost did, but I was hoping I'd get a bigger raise this time."
     "Even if you're telling the truth, which I doubt,
35 you realize that the Telegraph is on its last legs? So go on over to them, but don't come back looking for work here when the Telegraph shuts down," said Hooker. "I'll give you six dollars a week and a dollar-a-week raise every six months."
40   "Two years before I get ten? No sir, I can't wait that long."
     From time to time during the next dozen years Bob Hooker would try to re-hire Claude Emerson. To more and more citizens of the town Claude
45 Emerson was becoming a symbol, the only symbol, of newspaper reporting. They saved their news items for him and would give them to no one else. They would stop him in the midst of his morning rounds and shyly hand him articles they had written. "You
50 fix it up so it reads right, Claude," they would say, and he would do so. They were fascinated and not antagonized by the changes he would make, and when they saw their items in print, written in Claude Emerson's ornate style—"the festive board groaned
55 under the weight of delicious viands"—they became members of Claude's small army of volunteer reporters. Nor was it only the humble who relied on Claude Emerson for the proper presentation of news items; doctors and bankers trusted him; lawyers and
