History of Sharon Lois and Bram

The Formation of the Trio

Sharon, Lois, and Bram first came together in 1978, originally as a group performing at various children's events and festivals. Each member brought unique talents to the table:

1. Sharon Hampson: With a strong background in music and performance, Sharon's vibrant personality and stage presence quickly endeared her to young audiences.

2. Lois Lilienstein: Known for her warm voice and engaging storytelling abilities, Lois played a key role in connecting with children and parents alike.

3. Bram Morrison: A talented musician, Bram contributed with his guitar skills and harmonies, rounding out the trio's sound.

Their chemistry was immediate, and they began to create a repertoire of songs that would become staples in children's music.

Early Albums and Television Appearances

The trio released their first album, "One Elephant, Deux Éléphants," in 1979, which was met with great success. This album featured a delightful mix of traditional children's songs and original compositions. The catchy title track and others quickly became favorites among children.

In addition to their audio recordings, Sharon Lois and Bram gained national fame through their television show, "The Elephant Show," which aired from 1984 to 1989. The show featured the trio performing songs, engaging in skits, and inviting guests, all set in a whimsical and colorful environment that captivated young viewers. This platform allowed them to reach millions of children across Canada and the United States.
