- Women's roles: Women gather plant-based foods, nuts, and berries, contributing significantly to the community's sustenance.

Sexual Expression

Gender Roles

Inuit society traditionally features distinct but complementary roles for men and women, shaped by the challenges of the Arctic climate.

- Men's roles: Men are primarily responsible for hunting marine mammals and providing for the family. Their skills in navigating and surviving in extreme conditions are highly valued.
- Women's roles: Women are tasked with processing and preparing food, as well as making clothing and shelter. Their contributions are crucial to the family's survival.

- Community support: The Inuit place a high value on community support, often coming together to share resources and assistance during difficult times.
- Emotional expression: While Inuit culture may appear stoic, emotional expression exists within intimate relationships, often conveyed through acts of care and support rather than overt displays.
