Key Concepts in Sociology Chapter 5

1. Types of Social Groups

Social groups can be categorized into several types, each with distinct characteristics:

- Primary Groups: These are small, intimate groups characterized by close, personal relationships. Examples include family and close friends.
- Secondary Groups: Larger and more impersonal, these groups are task-oriented and goal-focused. Examples include coworkers or members of a political party.
- In-Groups and Out-Groups: In-groups are groups to which individuals feel they belong, while out-groups are those to which they do not belong, often leading to biases and stereotyping.

2. Group Dynamics

Understanding how groups function is essential in sociology. Key aspects include:

- Group Size: The number of members can influence the group's dynamics and interactions.

Organizations are larger social structures that bring together individuals to achieve specific objectives. They can be classified into:

- Formal Organizations: These have a clear structure, rules, and goals (e.g., corporations, government agencies).
