The play's wit and humor, combined with its sharp social commentary, make it a timeless classic.

Plot Summary

The plot centers on Jack Worthing, who lives in the countryside but frequently travels to London under the guise of his fictitious brother, Ernest. In London, Jack courts Gwendolen Fairfax, who is obsessed with the name "Ernest." Algernon, Jack's friend, learns about Jack's double life and decides to visit the country himself, pretending to be Ernest. The ensuing chaos of mistaken identities leads to comical misunderstandings and social satire.

Key Themes
