- Communicating the reasons behind rules helps children grasp their importance.

2. Positive Reinforcement

- Acknowledging and rewarding positive behavior encourages children to repeat those behaviors.
- Praise can be specific (e.g., "I appreciate how you helped your sibling") or general (e.g., "Great job today!").
- Rewards can vary from verbal praise to tangible rewards like stickers or extra playtime.

3. Emotional Availability

- While maintaining authority, parents should also be approachable and understanding.
- Active listening reinforces that parents value their children's feelings and opinions.
