The hare, amused at the idea of racing against such a slow creature, accepts the challenge with a smirk. As the race begins, the hare sprints ahead, leaving the tortoise far behind. Confident in his victory, the hare decides to take a nap, believing he has plenty of time to win.

Meanwhile, the tortoise continues to plod along at his own pace, unwavering and focused. As the hare snoozes, the tortoise makes steady progress and eventually passes the sleeping hare. When the hare awakens, he realizes that the tortoise is close to the finish line.
