This seminal essay was first delivered as a lecture in 1936 and later published in various forms. In it, Tolkien critiques the way Beowulf has been traditionally interpreted, primarily focusing on its monsters, such as Grendel and the dragon. "The Homecoming of Beorhtnoth Beorhthelm's Son"

This poem reflects Tolkien's deep engagement with Anglo-Saxon culture and literature. It revisits the Battle of Maldon, a historical event that Tolkien reinterprets through a modern lens. The essay serves as an exploration of heroism, loss, and the valor of combat.
