1. What are Bob's primary anxieties, and how do they manifest in his behavior?

Bob's anxieties are largely characterized by his overwhelming fears and his dependency on others for reassurance. His behaviors, such as his compulsive need to cling to Dr. Marvin, illustrate his struggles with separation anxiety.

2. How does Dr. Marvin's approach to therapy affect Bob?

Dr. Marvin initially adopts a traditional and somewhat detached approach to therapy, which contrasts sharply with Bob's need for warmth and connection. This dynamic creates a humorous yet insightful look at the impact of different therapeutic styles on patient outcomes.

4. How does the film depict the concept of "enabling"? Is Dr. Marvin an enabler?

Dr. Marvin's reactions to Bob's behavior can be seen as enabling at times, as he inadvertently reinforces Bob's dependence on him. This raises important questions about boundaries in therapeutic relationships and the responsibilities of the therapist.

Analyzing the Answers

When answering the questions on the worksheet, students should consider both the psychological theories they have learned and the specific events and character interactions in the film. Here are some tips for analyzing answers effectively:

1. Use Psychological Terminology

Incorporating psychological terms and concepts into responses can enhance the quality of the analysis. For example, discussing Bob's behaviors in terms of attachment theory can provide deeper insight into his character.

2. Refer to Specific Scenes

Citing specific scenes from the film to support claims is crucial. For instance, describing the scene where Bob first meets Dr. Marvin can illustrate his anxieties and set the stage for understanding his character development.
